Publicizing Club Events

At the September general meeting, Debby LaPierre reviewed the means club members have available to publicize events they plan for members and for community participation. It's important to note that these means are available, but not required. Your Publicity committee wants to be of assistance should you want our help.

When you have an event that will involve only our members, you may choose to send an item to the newsletter editor, Jo Lanni; describe the event at a general meeting and make a sign-up sheet available; and provide a flier to the website editor, Sharon Rasmussen, for posting to the member page.

It is when your event includes the general public that the Publicity Committee really should become involved. In addition to the means described above, they have experience and connections with local media and the GFWC and stand ready to help you tailor your message and share it with the community, from the preparation of media releases, fliers, etc. (Debby LaPierre and Sharon Rasmussen); to messages on Facebook (Dawn Nakash); to photographing (Debby LaPierre) and reporting on (Sharon Rasmussen) your event.

While we can't be actively involved in every event our busy members carry out, we will make every effort to assist you should you desire our help. For more information, we urge you to read the Communications Plan in the club Yearbook (which includes a sample media release and tips for writing about and photographing events) and to contact us.
